We've added new features in the categories of Upload, Display & Edit. The main new feature is a tag editor. Our main focus for this new update were the differences that came as of IE 11. Microsoft modified the way the browser handles the entire browsing experience, and made the update hard for developers to support. We're writing about our findings in this post. With IE 11, the way objects are created, and existing objects are removed, is very different from previous versions. Developers must make changes in the HTML (and possibly CSS). In addition, the changes to the DOM (Document Object Model) is also different. We'll cover the changes and the tips and tricks to follow for developers to get IE 11 to behave like previous versions, if desired. What are the most important browser changes with IE 11? The most important browser change is that now developer needs to make modifications to the HTML, and CSS to make IE 11 behave like previous versions of Internet Explorer. The DOM is also different.
